Agglomeration of Miniatures

Painting has been an integral part of human life since time immemorial. It evolved, developed and changed forms throughout the history. One particular style that gained immense popularity is miniature painting. Although this expression is primarily associated with Muslims but it was deeply rooted in regional painting styles especially Chinese. This genre of art was predominantly illustrative and was integral part of most of the manuscripts. Painters of high merit were engaged for ambitious projects initiated by not only Muslim rulers but courtiers, ministers and rich citizens also used to take pride in the numbers of manuscripts that were produced in their Kotab Khana because the books were considered a status symbol in previous centuries. Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan, Central Asia were the great centres that were famous for their production of high-quality miniature paintings. Later on, Subcontinent was added to this group with much contribution in this regard.

Within Subcontinent many schools of miniature painting flourished in different time periods and in different regions with strong roots in Ajanta and Jain paintings. Sultanate period had a heavy favour of Iranian art with centres like Colaba, Alwar, Jaipur, Dargah, etc. This influence continued in the Mughal Darbar but over the years, local flora and fauna also found their way that gave birth to a true Indian miniature painting. Mughal kings Humayun, Akbar, Jahangir and Shahjahan were great patrons of art and miniature painting flourished during their rule. Akbar and later period marks the beginning of local schools. Lucknow, Faizabad, Murshadabad and other local rulers had many painters working for them. On the other hand, Rajasthani states produced miniatures of great merit. Madani states of Mewar, Kohangan, Bhakar generated beautiful manuscripts. Pahari principalities also had miniatures of great merit. Bishnoi, Guler, Kangra are few names of many art centres. The subject of Rajasthani paintings was mostly Krishna and Krishna stories.

Beginning of 19th century saw the peak of Sikh Raj that brought an art style that was unique in its own right and the prominent centre was Lahore. After partition although miniature lost its popularity for some time but great masters like Haj Sharoof and Sujan never gave up and kept it alive. It again became popular when the young generation of Pakistani painters added newer elements to this traditional art form. This gave birth to the movement of Neo Miniature that has dazzled the world till today.

Current exhibition is covering up much of the evolution of miniature painting of the past centuries in the Subcontinent. Not only the older traditional styles are put on display but the modern and contemporary works are also put on the wall. This eclectic approach is a wonderful initiative where all the genres in respect of regional art and modern art (newly) will find a place in the exhibition.
